

Sinclair
Broadcasting Group,
under fire for ordering its 62 TV stations to broadcast a film critical of John Kerry's opposition
to the Vietnam War,
is a major investor
in a company
recently awarded a military contract by the Bush administration.

Jadoo Power Systems, Inc., a producer of
portable power
systems, announced September 28th that it had been awarded a contract to supply its products, which are used for covert
surveillance
operations, to US
Special Operations
Command.

Jadoo is owned by Sinclair Ventures,
Inc. and Contango
Capital Management.
Sinclair Ventures is subsidiary of
Sinclair Broadcast
Group, Inc.

The airing of the anti-Kerry film at election time by Sinclair has the appearance of an illegal quid pro quo
for the government
contract.

For the 2004
election, Sinclair
executives have donated nearly $59,000 to the Bush-Cheney campaign
or the Republican National Committee
(RNC), including a
$50,000 gift to the RNC from Sinclair
Vice President Fred
Smith.

The airing of the
anti-Kerry film at election time is a

defacto, illegal,
in-kind campaign
contribution.
